New apartments in prestigious residence Garches, Ile de France

In a magnificent wooded park, 42 luxury flats and duplexes with private gardens, terraces or roof terraces. From studios to 5-room apartments, they enjoy exceptional views of the golf course or the Eiffel Tower. Guy Béart describes his house in the song "Une maison tranquille". The four other buildings of the residence are located around the singer's Bauhaus-style home, which has been converted into a collective dwelling, within a park with lush vegetation. It is this residential spirit that we wanted to preserve for this human-sized residence of 42 luxury flats and duplexes, from studios to 5 rooms. Elegance and sobriety are the keywords of this luxury development. Its five buildings, separated by green spaces and served by pedestrian walkways, offer a varied range of volumes and heights while blending in a style that combines classicism and discreet modernity.

You will be able to take full advantage of the green setting in which the residence is nestled thanks to the numerous glass windows and French windows that will bring exceptional light into your home. Most of the apartments offer uninterrupted views of the Saint-Cloud golf course or the Eiffel Tower, as well as generous outdoor spaces (private gardens, terraces and roof terraces). A basement car park is also available. Find interesting fun facts about the Eiffel tower here, for your house warming party!
