The fences that delimit them are hidden by shrubby bands with curved lines, sometimes fine, sometimes groves. A few evergreen shrubs are treated in topiary balls in the middle of the massifs which come to draw stiffer shapes. The vegetal palette asserts itself on 2 main tones which are the blue and white. The beds are composed of perennials with reflections silver whose nuances are expressed from spring to autumn.

In winter, the orange and green foliage of certain shrubs, as well as that the brown of the grasses take care not to leave the garden bare. The trees animate with their variety of graphic foliage or colored the landscape atmosphere of the district. In the spring, apple tree, cherry and magnolia announce the white tones of the park. In fall, ash, ginkgo biloba and maple bring yellows and fiery reds in the plot. Could we imagine a frame more pleasant to look at all year round?
